Faculty Position: Biblical Studies and Theology

Tenure Track (Full Time)

ACADEMIC RANK

Assistant Professor (tenure track). Highly qualified candidates will be considered at higher rank.

STARTING SALARY

$62,929 and up. The University provides generous benefits

DEADLINE

Application review process starts November 1, 2020. Applications will be accepted until the position is filled.

PREFERRED STARTING DATE

June 1, 2021

INSTITUTIONAL REQUIREMENTS

To be considered for appointment, the candidate must wholeheartedly endorse the Mission Statement and the Statement of Faith of the University (see <https://www.kingsu.ca/about-us/about-kings/faith-commitment>). The successful candidate must demonstrate graduate level course work in the area of teaching or related experience. A Ph.D. in Biblical Studies and/or Theology is required.

TEACHING LOAD

Six term courses or equivalent per year.

PARTICULARS OF THE POSITION

The successful candidate will be one who can communicate to undergraduate students the beauty of the Christian faith as laid out in Scripture. The candidate must demonstrate an ability to teach introduction to the Bible courses in the King's Common Curriculum, which all King's students take. The candidate will also bring an ability to teach more specialized courses to students interested in deeper study and those in our Theology program. Courses that foreground biblical literature should also have a theological orientation consonant with the foundational mission of King's to equip students for service in God's world. King's is interested in scholars who can provide biblical perspectives (on gender or non-Western Christian theologies, for example) that can open student's eyes to the diversity of the Christian faith. As King's is a distinctively Christian and interdisciplinary liberal arts university, the successful candidate will also contribute to ongoing conversations about faithful scholarship with colleagues in other disciplines and with our wider supporting communities. The successful candidate will be committed to a faith-based approach to teaching and learning in the discipline and is expected to develop a program of scholarship.

APPOINTMENT

Subject to budget approval.
